Red Battalion Is Chopped Up Vietnamese

59th Year, No. 63

SAIGON (AP) - A task force of South Vietnamese paratroopers and infantry with thunderous air and artillery support chopped up a crack Communist battalion just south of the demilitarized zone today and milled at least 150 of the enemy, the Vietnamese Command announced.

A few miles to the west U.S. Marines were calling in air and artillery against a bunkered Communist ridgeline where dug-in North Vietnamese regulars killed 13 Marines and w under 63 on Thursday.

The fighting raged a few miles below the 17th parallel dividing Vietnam, an area where the Communists have shown every willingness to feed in fresh troops for a growing war of attrition.

THE PROPER USE OF DRUGS: How To Protect Your Home Against Drug Accidents

Most important is to keep drugs in a safe place, and well out of reach of children. Never leave any medicines — even aspirin — standing around on a bedside table or your dresser. Return them to the medicine cabinet immediately.

Your medicine cabinet should be closed and locked. An ordinary locked cupboard will do, so long as the key is well concealed. Even better is a medicine cabinet equipped with a combination padlock, or a "drug safe," a medicine chest with a combination lock available at very modest cost. Ask your druggist about one.

Above all, follow the advice of the Council on Family Health: Never, never tell your youngster that medicine is "candy" because "it tastes so good." Teach him at an early age that it makes no difference whether he likes his medicine or not; that it's something he must take when he is ill, and at no other time. And if you ever so much as suspect that a child has gotten into some medicine, call your doctor without delay. He would rather answer a hundred false alarms than have a child brought to him

Helping People

When sociologists study the federal government's efforts in the current War on Poverty they are almost certain to give special attention to what is now going on in the Upper Peninsula.

Much of it is unique and it intrigues the persons in Washington who are responsible for it. Here it's at our elbow and so we don't pay so much attention, and quite a bit of it goes unreported, or just lumped under some general heading of "Welfare Business."

There are some social and educational experiments underway here that could be guite influential in the development process of retraining Americans for continued usefulness in the economy.

Theres' a rather general agreement that our industrial economy progresses so fast, changes so rapidly, speeds obsolescence of products and skills so quickly, that most people cannot count upon lifetime durability of a job skill.

This means that many persons will have to go back to school or a retraining establishment of some kind to learn a new job skill once or twice in their adult lives. We're already rather deeply into this process in the War on Poverty's effort to lift men and women out of the ranks of the jobless and equip them for employment and self-sufficiency.

Nationally, this is being done by field administration method. The trainees live at home and go to day school in their home city. But in the Upper Peninsula this isn't practical. The population is spread so thinly over such a huge area in the U. P. that to make a workable program they must be brought together in training centers like that at Northern Michigan University

AMERICA'S MOST UNUSUAL SERVICE STATIONS

New Route Opened By PAT

Peninsula Air Transport, a scheduled third level airline, has begun service on a new route connecting the Upper Peninsula of Michigan with Green Bay and Madison, Wis.

Known as "PAT" because of those three large letters on the vertical tail surfaces of its aircraft, the Escanaba-based airline is continuing its efforts to "fill the gaps" in scheduled airline service. These gaps, in the opinion of PAT's General Manager Jon Thorin, have been "a natural result of the population growth of communities and the acquisition, by the larger airlines, of larger and larger aircraft which are not economically suited for use on many of the shorter legs between communities of medium to low population density."

PAT's President R. J. Norton, after accompanying one of the airline's crews as they operated the new route for the first time, commented on PAT's progress.

"We've been in operation since Feb. 8, 1967 on our routes connecting Marquette, Iron Mountain, Escanaba. Manistique and Sault Ste. Marie in the Upper Peninsula of Michigan. with Traverse City, Saginaw-Bay City-Midland and Lansing in the Lower Peninsula. During that time, we've enjoyed a steady growth of passenger traffic volume and now find ourselves somewhat ahead of our passenger boarding projections for this period of op-erating time. Recent schedule Country Club adjustments give some evidence of having created a more useful service for our customers and have improved our boardings at several points," he observed.

Though the dimensions of 25' 8" by 39' show it to be very compact, the interior of the house contains much livable area on two levels, with a service level below, separate enough to allow numerous activities to take place simultaneously, without conflict Geared especially to outdoor living, each room has large glass areas and is extended by its own outdoor deck. The largest single space, for group entertainment and relaxation, is the two-story-high living room, with its sloping, beamed ceiling and clerestory windows which, in addition to providing light, are an aid to natural ventilation. A stone wall at one end of the room contains a fireplace. One of the long walls, oriented toward the recreation area and major view from the site, is almost entirely of glass, with two sets of sliding doors onening onto a deak which runs the entire length of the structure. Depending upon the terrain, steps may be built from this deck directly to the ground, For pleasantweather cookouts, a barbecue is situated on this dock, one end of which, being accessible from the kitchen, can be used for outdoor dining, this area can be completely screened in. with the master bedroom deck above serving as a roof.
